TRAGEDY IN FAYETTEVILLE Edward L. Utley Shoots and Kills a Hotel Clerk.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.) FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Oct. 25 .- Edward L. Utley, a guest of the Hotel Lafayette, shot and instantly killed Theodore B. Hollingsworth, night clerk of the hotel, last night, the ball entering the temple and passing through the head. The difficulty arose from an expostulation on the part of the clerk against noise made. Utley fired at Hollingsworth before killing him, and the clerk went out for a policeman, but did not ask for his arrest, as he thought he would be quiet.

Shortly after the officer left, Utley came into the office and shot Hollings-worth through the head, the clerk falling dead behind his desk.

Utley is a young man of prominent and influential family, and is possessed of considerable means. Hollingsworth was a man of good character, who had only recently taken the position of night clerk. Unfortunately, Mr. M. McI. Mathews, proprietor of the hotel, had gone out to spend the evening and had not returned at the time of the difficulty, or he probably could have prevented it.

HE LEARNED A GREAT TRUTH.
